

Brazil sustentability or nothing

Wagener Santos Lopes

Founder of Grupo W Nioenergy, Brasil

Copyright: 2021. Santos Lopes W This is an open-access article distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution License, which permits unrestricted use, distribution, and reproduction in any medium, provided the original author and source are credited.

Abstract

It's not an easy conversation, but it is necessary to speak. Most people in Brazil don't know about green businesses. Brazil has everything to be the most evolved country in relation to clean energy, but our bureaucracy prevents us from being leaders. Even in a pandemic scenario, the renewable energy sector has not stopped growing and this trend will last.

Today we're in 55th place among the countries with energy freedom. But for a short time, therefore, the opening of the energy market until 2023 is already being discussed

Biography:

Wagner Lopes has assembled a team from around the world delivering social impact improvements for Climate Restoration. In 2014, he presented a keynote talk, "Commercialization of Biochar," in Scotland for the EU COST Action TD1107, and thereafter was appointed co-chair of Commercialization Working Group 3. Mermell earned a certificate in Biochar Training for Environmental Sustainability and Economic Development at the Universidad de Santiago de Compostela, Spain, under the auspices of the International Biochar Initiative, the UK Biochar Centre, Fraunhofer UMSICHT, and Massey University. He holds an MBA in marketing management and served as a student adjunct in the Wharton-Recanati Program.

Publications:

1. A framework for causal analysis of land-use change and bioenergy policy's potential role
2. Carbon land food - Biofuel Cropping Systems Langeveld et al are a group of researchers who came up with a novel the top of the page
3. Brazil's biofuel industry

Citation: Wagener Santos Lopes Founder of Grupo W Nioenergy, Brasil. Brazil sustentability or nothing. 1st International conference on Internal Medicine and Primary Care , Oct 22-23, 2021 at Paris, France