

Cancer

Fadi Abusal

Yarmouk University of Jordan, Irbid, JORDAN

Abstract:

Journey of a medical student who was diagnosed with cancer, more specifically Mediastinal Seminoma. A rare cancer in which I was the 105th case world wide. I wanted to share this journey on stage in front of many medical students whom are struggling in their medical career, as I am a medical student in my 5th, I will be in my last (6th) in the date of the conference. Sharing this journey in front of my colleagues might change their lives in a whole, I am hoping at least think positive in there lives. I was diagnosed with cancer in the begining of my clinical courses on Day 1.

I was surrounded by many negative people trying to put me down by trying me to consider a year drop. Which I refused directly and wanted eagerly to prove them all wrong. So I took my books and lectures with me to chemotherapy session with 1 hand holding my lecture and the other having the IV. Canula. I used to force myself into the clinical rotations with my doctors back in my school with gloves and masks to try reduce the risk of infections as my immunity was nearly 0. I used to go all the way to irbid from amman which is a 1 hr 30 min ride and back again to KHCC for my chemotherapy session daily for my whole period of treatment. I passed all my exams with grades my colleagues have not reached it even.

Biography:

Fadi Abusal a medical student currently in his 5th year of medical school in Yarmouk university of Jordan. A 22 years old student with great ambitions to one day become an Influencer through his journey fighting the CANCER. He's part of many organizations back in his country related in Cancer services in helping people fight back there illness, currently working on completing my career in the UK.

7th International conference on Medical and Nursing education, July 17, 2020, Vienna, Austria

Citation: Fadi Abusal, Dr. Cancer, 7th International conference on medical and nursing education, July 17, 2020, Vienna, Austria.