Report Description

The market research analysts have predicted the global women's health market to grow at a CAGR of more than 3% over the forecast period. With many countries improving the healthcare facilities, the market for women's health will have a positive outlook in the coming years. Many countries have substantially increased their healthcare budgets as a part of their social security measure. For instance, the US government spend 17% of their GDP on the healthcare sector in 2014. With such increases in the budgets by various countries, the women's health market is expected to show growth until the end of 2020.

In the research report, the analysts have estimated factors such as the growing awareness of birth control methods will spur the growth of this market in the forecast period. Contraception and fertility control are supported by the governments of developing nations such as India and China to curb the growing population. However, in western countries, women have stopped using contraceptive pill due to their side effects and are increasingly using IUDs and implants. Therefore, the increasing awareness about alternative growth methods will aid in the growth of this market until the end of 2020.

Market Dynamics

Revitalization of primary health care requires a change in education and training of the health workforce to enable them to respond effectively to health-care demands. Nurses working in the community (community health nurses or public health nurses) need to reorient their thinking and practices by focusing more on the prevention and promotion of health of people in the community. The framework for community nursing education guides nurse educators on the contents to be included in the community health nursing course in the pre-service nursing programme, as well as on capacities that the nursing education institutions should have to promote community nursing teaching. The framework provides guidance on the core functions, roles and areas of work of community health nurses in the health-care system, classification of the population targets, competencies of nurses working in the community, and the participatory teaching and learning process.
